

WHAT IS GENE EDITING?

Gene editing is the process of making a tiny, controlled change in the DNA of a living being to produce a GMO.

- Gene editing is used around the world.
- In the United States, federal agencies regulate gene editing.
- Ethicists and concerned parties are carefully debating potential uses for gene editing.

