The Importance of Not Having Too Short a Memory

In honor of

Dr. Clint Chapple

Department of Biochemistry

Friday, August 29

Lecture: 3:30 - 4 pm

Dean's Auditorium (PFEN 241)

Reception: 4 - 5 pm

Pfendler Hall

sponsored by the Office of Academic Programs

Dr. Chapple is a distinguished professor of biochemistry at Purdue University. He has taught undergraduate biochemistry to a broad cross section of College of Agriculture students during the past 10 years and is now responsible for teaching introductory biochemistry to undergraduate biochemistry majors.

Dr. Chapple has recently assumed the responsibility of head of the Department of Biochemistry and in that role is leading his colleagues through a comprehensive review of the department's undergraduate curriculum.
