David G. Lewis
Lewis Consulting Group, Inc.

David G. Lewis uses his personal experience to teach people how to make sense in a senseless world. He has spoken to numerous association, corporate, and not-for-profit audiences. He launched his career in law enforcement where he learned firsthand how the lack of integrity can affect your personal/organizational bottom line. He then returned to Illinois State University and completed a master’s degree in political science. David then spent several years working as a higher education administrator at Purdue University in West Lafayette, IN.

David is certified by Purdue and the University of Oklahoma in diversity facilitation and is a certified trainer for Steven Covey’s 7 Habits of Highly Successful People. He is also certified in Emotional Intelligence facilitation through Georgetown University. He founded Lewis Consulting Group, Inc., an educational training organization, in 1998. David has taught both at the elementary and secondary level and currently teaches a political science course on American government and politics at Heartland Community College in Normal, Oklahoma.

“These events not only celebrate the great contributions of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., but demonstrate our College’s commitment to building an inclusive environment.”

–Dr. Pamala Morris
Assistant Dean & Director, Office of Multicultural Programs, COA
